Dear Mr. Beloin,

On January 22, 2004, I observed your demonstrations. They were quite impressive! There are few if any competitive systems that could survive such rigorous tests.

I was very impressed with your extreme puncture resistance demonstration. The test you performed likely exceeded the required ASTM tests.

Your system's fire resistance demonstrations were particularly enlightening with the roofing spar being heated to glow-red temperatures. I don't believe most competitive systems could stand that extreme fire exposure. Your system seems to be a premium system designed for long life and rugged performance. School districts interested in long term trouble free service and low life cycle costs should be receptive to this type of roofing system.

Sincerely,

Roofing Consultant
